'Al-Ahram' hits terrorists for Trieste attack

CAIRO (UPI). — Palestinian ter-rorists should drop attacks against outside targets, such as the Trieste, Italy, oil tanks, and operate underground in Israeli-held territory, "Al-Ahram" newspaper said vesterday.

Ali Hamdi el Gammal, "Al-Ahram's" managing editor, said that after Jordan's suppression of the terrorists and curbs on their activities in south Lebanon, "there is virtually no option for them but to resist from within occupied territory."

Referring to the claim by the Black September group that it blew up an oil terminal at Trieste, Gammal said: "It is no use that one of these organizations should blow up oil tanks in another country as was the case in Italy. This is a secondary matter and will not affect Israeli occupation in any way.

"These organizations should turn to fruitful and effective action inside occupied Arab territory.

Gammal said the huge number of Arabs living under Israel rule could play an important role in supporting terrorists in opera-tions to force Israel to change its policy.

'Commando action should be inside the occupied lands, not outside them," Gammal said. "It should be directed against Israel and its authorities not against Gammal said terrorists should ensure full cooperation between those inside administered territory and those outside.

The sources added that Brezhnev made no mention of the summit which Sadat had requested when he told the Russians to leave last month.

The paper said that in his message Brezhnev was believed to have voiced annoyance at Sadat's calling the out cautious feelers to the West, Russian ouster "a kind of national liberation for Egypt."

Hearing on Insurance Ins't strike

The Jerusalem District Labour Court is this morning hearing the plea of the National Insurance Institute to declare illegal the atrike of its 1,700 employees, now in its day. The application states the strike contravenes the labour law forbidding strike action while a group labour agreement is

The Court had earlier rejected a plea by the Institute to issue a unilateral order against 12 members of the works committee to end the strike. Judge Ze'ev Negbi instead ordered representatives of the strikers, the Civil Service Umon and the Histadrut union to appear before him as parties to the group labour agreemen

Meanwhile, National Insurance Institute head Dr. Israel Katz has sent the strikers a letter promising them his support for their demands if they end their strike tomorrow. In his letter, The Post learned last night, Dr. Katz says that if the strike continues another two days the July and August children's allowance cheques will fail to reach many families and cause hardship to almost half a million children Any delays in allowances would also hurt about 200,000 elderly persons and dependents, the letter says. "You are not likely to gain any-thing by causing inconvenience to such large numbers of people." Dr.

Informed sources believe that Dr. Katz's appeal may have an influence on the strikers. Only his threat to resign averted an earlier strike in

Thieves disturbed at work

Thieves about to steal a safe from an East Jerusalem jewellery store were interrupted by a police patrol early yesterday morning. The patrolmen's suspicions were aroused by two cars parked next to the store, adjacent to the Am-bassador Hotel. As they approached, five men quickly got into one of the cars and drove off. The thieves, it turned out, had broken into the store and moved the safe, apparently with the intention of loading it on the second car, stolen earlier in Tel Aviv. The safe contained cash and jewellery worth several hundreds of thousands of pounds.

The store owner was alerted After inspection, he reported that the thieves did manage to take away IL30,000 worth of jewellery with Professor Jaroslav Sabata and Alfred Cerny, both leading members of the ousted liberal regime of Alexander Dubcek, were sentenced on Tuesday night on charges of plotting the overthrow of Czecholovakia's socialist system.

Professor Sabata, former secretary of the Communist Party's City Committee in Brno, Moravia, and a leading theoretician during the brief Dubcek reign in 1968-69, was jailed for 61/2 years.

Mr. Cerny, former regional secretary of South Moravia, was jailed for three years. Five lesser figures got sentences ranging up to five

It was the eighth trial since July 17 and brought to 38 the number of people sentenced so far. There have been no acquittals.

All were accused of forming an illegal anti-state group which en-gaged in hostile activity between 1970 and January this year with the aim of overthrowing Czechoslovakia's socialist system, according to the official Czechoslovakia news agency Ceteka.

Mr. Cerny was coopted into the Communist Party's Central Com-mittee in September 1968 in a move by Mr. Dubcek's forces to strengthen the reformists' position in the party's top organs of power. He later lost his post and was ex-pelled from the party. Professor Sabata, who has been

'Modern slavery' practised in France, says 'Newsweek'

NEW YORK (AP). - French employers who import poor and illiterate Africans "for dirty, backbreaking jobs in factories, kitchens and building sites" are practising "modern slavery," "Newsweek" said

The internationally circulated news magazine quoted U.N. and Italian authorities who are fighting to halt a traffic in illegal black migrants to France. "Newsweek" related instances of police finding the transported workers in squalid conditions and added: "Since most of the Africans — usually bewildered illiterates from former French collonies such as Mali, Senegal and the Ivory Coast - lack French work permits, they are smuggled into the country via Italy. The Jewish exodus from Arab lands is continuing

WHEN the State of Israel was established in 1948 some 845,000 Jews lived in Arab lands. Today only 50,000 remain (and 60 per cent of these are in Casablanca). Most of those who left have come to Israel; the second largest group is in France; others are in Canada, the U.S. and other countries in Europe and Latin America. The major exodus was in the early years of the State when communities of Yemen, Iraq and Libya were largely evacuated. The period 1954-57 saw large-scale emigration from Morocco, Egypt and Tunisia and the early 1960s from Algeria. Facts and figures together with a description of recent developments concerning Jews in Arab lands appear in a survey by Dr. Hayyim J. Cohen of the Hebrew University's Institute of Contemporary Jewry in the latest issue of "Gesher" (published by the Israel Executive of the World Jewish Con-Information on the subject remains scarce, he notes, especially concerning Syria, Iraq, Egypt and Libya. In other Arab lands, the position of the Jews has improved somewhat in recent years, although Jews are leaving these lands too - for fear of a change of regime.

Libya

Libya: The projected union of Lib-ya and Egypt would add Libya's 90 Jews to Egypt's 700. Despite the minuteness of the Libyan community, the Gaddafi regime has maintained an unfavourable policy. A decree issued in 1970 confiscated the property of 620 Libyans of whom 605 were Jews. This was said to be directed against those who had left the country. Subsequently, they were offered compensation in government bonds and return of the property if they returned to Libya — but the good faith of this offer is doubtful when it is realized that 32 of the Jews concerned never left Libya, but nevertheless have not received their property back. Jews in Libya are not allowed to leave the country, Egypt: Egyptian Jews also are not allowed to leave. The few who do succeed are not permitted to take any money or property. The last of the Jews arrested at the time of the Six Day War were released in July 1970, and no Jews are being held in prison. (The last group released numbered 81 persons who were immediately flown to France.) The Jews suffer from unemployment and poverty as their property has been confiscated. Communal property has also been confiscated and communal funds frozen. Few synagogues are open. The Ibn Extra synagogue in Cairo has been turned into a museum displaying ancient scrolls of the Law, etc.

Iraq: After the Six Day War. the aftuation of the 3,000 Jews then in Iraq deteriorated and they were not allowed to leave the country. The situation grew even worse after the rise of the Ba'th party in trying to leave the country, but eventually they, and other Jews who had been arrested, were freed, following U.S. intervention. In 1969, the Iraq government announced that Jews could register for emigration and about 1,800 did so but only about 30 were then allowed to leave. At the same time, Jewish students, who had been banned from Baghdad University since 1967, found it possible to be admitted for studies.

How India counts the tigers

By GAMINI SENEVIRATIVE

THE 1,265,000 square miles of the Indian Union now contain an estimated 2,000 Bengal tigers—Pan-kera tigris tigris — and this is the only member of the tiger family, till recently numerous from Sheria to south of Sarawak and from China across to the Caspian Sea, that can hope to survive for much longer.

PEKING AGAIN LOOKING FOR SPORTS CHAMPIONS

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH SINGAPORE (Ofns). --

MASHIONS in ideological sin change in China almost as fast as hemdines and hats in more frivolous lands, and it now looks as if yesterday's vice of "championitis" may become tomorrow's virtue. The competitive urge to win at sports for grory and gain, to put tech-nique before the study of Marx and Mao, has been damned in the past as a deviation, and trainers of topflight players who transgressed were rutidessly axed during the Cultural Revolution of the 'sixtles for peddiing such "counter-revolutionary reisionist trash."

It has been suggested that the gap this purge left, the shortage of fine performers worthy of representing China abroad in these days of ping-pong diplomacy — and per-haps at the Munich Olympics has now induced a change of the official "line." For the active members of the rump Politburo in Pe king celebrated the 51st anniversary of the founding of the Chinese Communist Party this month by attending no parades and making no speeches, but by handing around prizes at "an imposing ceremony" to winners of China's national bas-ketball, volleyball, football, table tennis and badminton tournaments, which were held in June for the first time for several years. Outgoing passengers converge on an El Al Boeing 747.

Praise for El Al performance, criticism of staff benefits

The State Comptroller's report on El Al constitutes a unique record The report reveals that Midbar of performance, not only in Israel (a foreign-owned drilling company terms, but in the international arena as well. The report, which reviews the national air carrier's activities first since 1963. In these years, the company passed from dependence the turbo-prop Britannias into last year over the unconventional problems posed by operation of the Boeing 747 jumbo.

The two jumbos within a single year increased El Al's capacity from 565 million km./tons to 698 million. In the same year the number of passengers transported grew by more than a third over the previous year - 692,000 compared to 522,000. In the years 1969 and 1970 El Al occupied 18th place among IATA'S 100 members in the total of km./tons flown. But it was already eighth in 1969 in the passenger load factor of its planes, and the following year rose to third place. With regard to the important transatlantic route, served by 21 airlines, El Al was third in passenger occupancy in 1969, rising to second place in 1970.

The fast rate of expansion in recent years, with regard both to routes flown and to passengers car-ried, was not without its growing nains. It came at a time of general expansion in the world's transport aviation with the advent of jumbos, and a consequent fall in average income from passengers. Time was required properly to absorb the newly acquired Boeing 747s, the second of which was received only last November.

Sadat on thin Russian ice

TT took the Russian leaders almost three weeks to recover from Egyptian President Sadat's expulsion order and its aftermath. For the first time in Soviet history, a second-rate power has put Russia in a highly embarrassing position and has brought about a major reversal in Soviet global strategic planning.

What aggravated the Soviet leaders most was the manner in which Sadat made his decision and implemented it. Instead of first consulting with the Kremlin, as called for in the Egyptian-Soviet Friendship Treaty, Sadat first issued the travelling orders to the Russians and then suggested a high level meeting with the Soviet leaders. It was obvious that the Kremlin would take a dim view of such proceedings, which could set a bad example to other countries in the Middle East and else-

The Soviets were in no hurry to react to Sadat's moves. Yet they could ill afford to let him get away with them. Now it appears that Leonid Brezhnev has written a stiff note to the Egyptian President in which he questioned his motives, inte-grity and wisdom and, above all, pointed out to him, if the Beirut newspapers are to be believed, that the Egyptian-Libyan union was incompatible with Article 9 of the Egyptian-Soviet treaty. This article for-bids union with a country hostile to the Soviet Union.

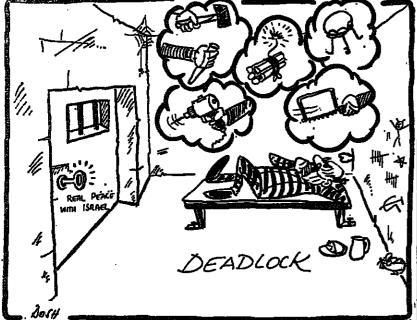

It is not yet known whether these were the only points in the Soviet note. What is certain is that Egypt is very disturbed by the content and tone of the note and is perhaps seeking a way out of the threatened impasse with the Soviets. It is highly likely, therefore, that Cairo may be looking for a mediator with Moscow. One of the names mentioned, that of Marshall Tito, is most plausible.

The euphoria which followed the expulsion of the Russians is now wearing off. Egypt now finds herself not only less able to make war against Israel, but her arms supplies and spare parts are threatened as well. The rumours about the purchase of arms from Britain and France may be part of a psy-chological game Egypt is play-ing. But it is obvious that Sadat cannot equip his army with Western arms over-night. As if to remind him of his vulnerability, the Soviets have published facts and figures about the strength of the Israeli army and its potential in various fields.

For the time being it is unlikely that either Cairo or Moscow will permit the situation to slide out of their control. Negotiations are in the offing. But before they can take place, the Soviets want to be sure that they will negotiate from a position of strength. They do not want to create the impression that they are running after Sadat, but rather that he needs them, and badly.

Russia and Egypt can, therefore, be expected to seek a new accommodation, but not before Sadat makes a conciliatory gesture designed to as-suage Russian feelings. Sadat will have to weigh his next steps very carefully, far more than he seemed to have calculated when he decided to ask the Russians to leave Egypt.

'How the hell do we get out of here?"

BREAKDOWN IN COMMAND

By Erwin Frenkel

THE battle between Foreign Minister Abba Eban and the Ambassador in Washington, Yitzhak Rabin, has for long been unedifying.

It has distorted relations between the Ministry and its most important Embassy, embarrassed officials, especially those loyal to Rabin, but whose careers lie in the Ministry, and fettered detached analysis of policy moves and proposals.

Even those closest to the combatants have never been able to satisfy themselves on the causes of the strife. Politically the two men have similarities, Rabin, like Eban, is not overly enthusiastic about retaining territory. Eban, like Rabin, does not lightly dismiss the sagacity of the top American policy makers.

Explanations for the dispute are sought therefore in their contrasting styles and temperaments. The soldier is contrasted to the diplomat, the brash sabra to the sonorous sophisticate, the realist to the political intellectual.

But the real cause is probably neither political nor personal, and stems from a breakdown in the hierarchy of command. Never tailored to fit the conventional mode and procedures of the Ministry, Rabin is not simply an envoy, but an Israeli policy maker stationed in Washington. Whether these were explicit terms of ref-erence at the outset is not known, but with at least tacit encouragement from the Prime Minister, it became Rabin's role. The discord with the Foreign

Different assessments of policy and the perquisites of command became hopelessly and grievous-ly intertwined. How these tortured relations between Mr. Eban and Mr. Rabin affected policy toward the U.S. is not given to public view, though it is clear that Mr. Eban's prestige among U.S. policy makers declined. And it is reasonable to assume that Mr. Rabin, seen in Washington as the most immediate link with Mrs. Meir, was only further influenced to disparage the Ministry and its chief.

Moreover since Israel's rela-tions with the U.S. touch on almost every important problem of Israel foreign policy, the Washington command post felt free to conceive its role not with a narrow reading of bilateral U.S.-Israel relations, but in broader terms. Relations with the Arabs, the U.N., Dr. Jarring, the Soviet Union, Europe, as well as the more conventional questions of arms, economic aid, and ties with the Jewish community, all came into range of Mr. Rabin's cables to Jerusalem.

But now on the eve of Mr. Rabin's return it has taken on a new dimension. Not only Mr. Rabin's achievements, but also his character have become fair game. This reflects the fund of bitterness that has accumulated in the Ministry. But it may also betray political calculations bearing on the future. For while Mr. Rabin may be reconciled to the fact that he will not now be able to enter the Cabinet, despite promises from Mrs. Meir and Mr. Sapir, he certainly aspires to a central post after the 1973 elections. And it is perhaps difficult for Mr. Eban to conceive how he could sit at the same Cabinet table, or even in the Ministry, with the spirited envoy.

Moreover, since both are identified with the Allon-Saoir constellation, in the Labour Party competition for leadership in 1973 their rivalry, rather than being diffused by Mr. Rabin's return home could intensify.

If that occurs the curious guerrilla warfare already underway in the Labour Party, pitting Mr. Sa-pir against Mr. Ben Aharon, and both against Mr. Dayan, and the latter against Mr. Allon, may re-ceive an added incendiary ingredient making for shrill headlines but also for increased pressure on Mrs. Meir to remain at her post in order to keep the iid on

Mr. ALLON EXPLAINS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - If ever there was a mali. cious concoction it is surely to be found in the last two paragraphs of your editorial of August 9.

The true facts are as follows: The question of the return of the former inhabitants of Bir'im and Ikrit was discussed at a meeting of Archbishop Raya with the Prime Minister on April 4, 1972.

At that meeting the P.M. told the Archbishop that she would be prepared to give the matter further thought if he undertook to accept the decision as final This under her decision as final. This undertaking was duly given. Shortly before the departure of the P.M. for Vienna in June, information was received that prepara-tions were made by the impatient villagers to take the law into their own hands. They were warned by the security authorities against taking any such action.

Later after the departure of the

P.M. Archbishop Raya phoned the Deputy Prime Minister and asked him to come to his aid as he was being besieged by the villagers. The Deputy Prime Minister told the Archbishop that if the villagers promised not to take any illegal action and return to their homes, he would agree to receive a delegation as proposed by the Archbishop. The pro mise was given and the meeting took place two days later on Jun

Perhaps it is not insignificant tha the only words in the paragraph. referred to above actually ascribed to the villagers are the words "needed only the return of Mrs. Meir," for that is the only part of the text that is true. The Deputy Prime Minister, who was in constant con-tact on the master with Mrs. Melr, told the delegation - on her authority - that she would inform them of her decision on her return. Nothing that Mr. Alion said to the delegation could by any flight of imagination had been interpreted as arousing any expectation such as insinuated in your editorial. This latest fabrication is in keeping with similar attacks by The Post on the Deputy Prime Minister of Education and Cultore in the past equally based on distortions and inaccuracies. AMNON DANKNER

BRIAN FRANK Nazareth Ilit, July 12.

B.O.A.C. replies:

I too had noticed the omission of Tel Aviv in the advertisement in "London Calling." I immediately took this up with our Head Office in London, who are responsible for this form of advertising. I am now assured from London that the omission of Tel Aviv was a very unfortunate printer's error and that Tel Aviv will resume its proper place in subsequent copies of the advertisement.

Manwhile, I would be most grateful if you would assure Mr. Frank that in spite of this printer's error B.O.A.C. toll Take Good Care of Hin in Tel Aviv.
